Matchday 3 – Fulham 1-0 Spurs Premier League, Aug 4, 2012 Mauricio Pochettino's side were in safe hands after 16 minutes when Clint Dempsey, back from suspension, tapped in from close range. Fulham then took control of the match and caught out the defence with a neat move. The ball was cut back into Cottagers defender Brede Hangeland, who curled the ball past Hugo Lloris, but replays showed defender Kyle Naughton had handled before the shot was taken. Thomas Vermaelen then fired a fierce strike just wide of the far post as Spurs battled to end their unbeaten start to the season on a positive note. Midfielder Graham Parker was also injured late on as he was shown a red card by referee Mike Dean following an aerial clash with Alex Kacaniklic. Bryan Ruiz soon restored Fulham's lead as he claimed his second goal of the match, when he was given space to fire home from just inside the area. The Cottagers were left to rue a missed opportunity after midfielder Yannick Bolasie fired wide late on, but the hosts remain unbeaten since the opening day of the season, moving to second place, while Spurs now slip to fifth. In Sunday's early kick-off, Tottenham make the short trip to north London to face his former club, Arsenal, before they return home to face Chelsea. For more information on Tottenham Hotspur's ongoing pre-season campaign, please visit our official website at drinking alcohol, for some people, inhibiting the function of certain neurotransmitters in the brain can lead to different, more intense types of intoxication, the researchers say. Like most neurotransmitters, the excitatory and inhibitory ones are used by the brain to regulate a wide range of physiological functions, from motor movement to the regulation of mood. They're made by the neurons that act as "senders" or "receivers" in the brain. Previous research has shown that certain neurotransmitters in the brain may affect some people's response to alcohol more than others. Now, researchers from the University of Queensland have found that inhibiting certain chemical messengers in the brains of mice appears to dramatically increase their response to alcohol. They say their results suggest that inhibiting specific neurotrans

Jan. 18: A planned meeting between San Jose City Council and Costa Mesa City Council has been postponed. Council members in both cities have had limited communications this month since both cities have been locked in a contentious fight over the Silicon Valley International Airport and Costa Mesa Mayor Gary Montero's approval for a bus rapid transit line on West 17th Street. Costa Mesa Mayor Gary Montero is at the forefront of the campaign to stop San Jose's planned expansion of the Silicon Valley International Airport. Montero is frustrated that he is part of a two-city coalition that is fighting the airport expansion, and another council member has said he will vote against the measure. Montero wants the airport expansion to remain within the cities of San Jose and Santa Clara County. Santa Clara Mayor Lisa Gillmor and the Santa Clara County Board of Supervisors voted to extend the boundary for the SIR—Airports Concession, LLC (SIRAC) in June 2016. Mayor Lisa Gillmor of Santa Clara has said she does not support expanding the boundaries for the SIRAC concessionaire, which was created in a 2013 agreement signed by cities of San Jose, Santa Clara, San Mateo, Alameda, and San Francisco. That agreement authorized the creation of a public-private partnership to promote aviation-related economic development by creating the airport and surrounding SIRAC zone. Since then, the Metropolitan Transportation Commission has granted $378 million in grants for the creation of a multimodal transportation hub, as well as for local and regional improvements in the airport area. In the 5-4 vote, Santa Clara County ended up extending the boundary for the airport to include San Francisco International Airport. San Francisco City Attorney Dennis Herrera and Santa Clara County supervisors Judy Arnold and Ken Yeager cited concerns over public safety and noise pollution. Montero, who was part of the 2013 vote in favor of airport expansion, says those concerns have now changed and that the public has not been properly consulted on the issue. The SIRAC board accepted the San Jose City Council proposal on the airport expansion in October. San Jose's plan provides for an expansion of the SIRAC concessionaires and for the creation of a new Terminal 4. A preliminary environmental impact report for the expansion was issued in January 2016. The airport project has attracted strong support from Silicon Valley business, political and labor communities. But it has been sharply opposed by Costa Mesa, which is located near
