Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness The Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness (BWCAW) is a U.S. Wilderness Area in the U.S. state of Minnesota, at the northern border with Canada, west of International Falls. The wilderness area, and the Lake Superior watershed that it protects, extends along the Canadian border and includes the Canadian Provincial Wilderness Area of Voyageurs National Park. Its U.S. access is via International Falls, Minnesota. Two-thirds of the BWCAW and the Voyageurs National Park are within unorganized territory of the St. Louis County, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

History The wilderness area was established in 1980, and in 1998 was split into the Upper and Lower boundaries of the BWCAW. The wilderness area was named for the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness Act of 1978. Originally, the entire area was a Minnesota national forest, administered by the United States Forest Service. In 1986 it was transferred to the U.S. Department of the Interior and became part of the Superior National Forest. However, much of the wilderness area remains under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Forest Service, the St. Louis County Natural Resources Department, and the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, and it includes both state and federal land. Geology and geography The Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness is among the largest wilderness areas within the United States, and the largest wilderness area in the contiguous U.S. in land area. It is bordered by Canada on three sides (west, north and east), and by the U.S. state of Ontario, Canada, on the fourth. The wilderness area is located immediately north of the Canada–United States border. According to the U.S. Forest Service, "The Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness also is the largest man-made ecosystem on the planet, encompassing over 1.3 million acres of lakes, forests and wetlands. In the United States, only Florida's Everglades swamp and the Gulf Coast's wetlands complex and prairies (Cobb, Gulf of Mexico) are larger. In Canada, only the North American boreal forest is larger. The lakes within the wilderness area are in the Saint 3e33713323
