This tab is further divided into sections that include the General settings, the Configuration settings, the Schedule settings, the Required settings and the Advanced settings. We will dive into these sections in a bit more detail. The advanced settings tab is where the user has access to a few options for fine-tuning the app. We will go into more detail about these in the configuration section. The host tab is where the user can host their scheduled tasks. The process is pretty straightforward and easy to use. Just click the "Host" tab and select the path of the executable you wish to run. Choose whether you want the scheduled tasks to run in the foreground or the background. Even more, you can also enable the process to run in response to certain events. The control tab is where the user has access to every other tab. PC AutoTimer has a lot of functions under the control tab, but you can explore these in more details in the following section. Features of PC AutoTimer The following are the top essential features of PC AutoTimer: The configuration settings tab offers you a few options to tweak the working of the app. Here, you can tweak or alter certain properties and parameters, such as the system clock, the windows scheduler, the desktop, and the time.
