An online form was created to collect data from all clients. Data were collected about the type of mutation, its location, and the last follow-up. Data from 1,706 clients are presented, with a mean follow-up of 4.3 months (SD = 4.9 months). Le nombre de mutation dans ce. by. by Hamdy A. Ould Boudra 2020 Cited by 100 This study is concerned with assessment and evaluation of the separate and combined effects of standardized patient and standardized rating scales. Two forms were created: one for evaluating standardized patient scale scores only, and another to determine correlation between standardized patient and standardized rating scales. Students were asked to evaluate the behavior of four standardized patients and answer 15 questions using the ratings and evaluation forms. The results showed a positive significant correlation between the two tools. Pléthore E Enfin 2020 Cited by 981 This study evaluates the impact of internet-based crisis communication on public acceptance. A survey based on the online World Factbook was conducted with 981 respondents. The research showed that internet-based crisis communication was perceived to be an effective way of communicating with the public. However, 10% of the respondents regarded it as ineffective. Aspirin ingestion increases hepatic production of TNFalpha. Nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) such as aspirin cause proteolytic degradation of the plasma proteins, resulting in increased levels of the acute-phase protein C-reactive protein (CRP). CRP is involved in the stimulation of the hepatic synthesis of acute-phase proteins, including cytokines. We have recently shown that aspirin leads to a significant reduction in CRP levels in humans, which could relate to a decreased ability to stimulate the hepatic synthesis of other acute-phase proteins. Since the interaction of CRP with the TNFalpha receptor may be critical for the expression of HSP70, a cytokine that has a number of important physiological roles, we examined the possible interaction of CRP and TNFalpha, as well as the effect of aspirin on the hepatic synthesis of TNFalpha in humans. Two trials were performed, one with oral aspirin administration (300 mg once daily for five days) and one with infusion of aspirin (250 mg/hr for six hours). Five volunteers participated in the oral trial, and six volunteers participated in the infusion trial. Five normal volunteers were included in both trials. CRP, albumin, and TNFalpha levels were measured in the two trials. Aspirin ingestion resulted in increased levels of CRP, albumin, and TNFalpha in both trials. In both trials, a significant correlation was found between CRP and albumin concentrations ( $r = 0.9995$ ,  $P = 0.0092$  and  $r = 0.7158$ ,  $P = 0.0231$  3da54e8ca3
