[Image: BBC World Service] During a period of the year that has seen a half-billion dollars poured into the US, Australia, and the UK for humanitarian crisis-response, the opposite is happening in Africa. Faced with a burgeoning humanitarian crisis, countries like Ethiopia have slashed the funding for international aid, leaving people on the ground struggling to provide for themselves. A few of the places where a lack of aid is causing death and misery: 1) Somali Refugee Camps More than a quarter of the population of Somalia, a country with a poverty rate of more than 90 percent, has fled their homes. More than 1.5 million people are displaced within the country and another 800,000 people who have been internally displaced by violence are living in camps. Almost 300,000 refugees are crammed into a single camp in Dadaab. The number of people without access to clean water is at least 1.1 million and the number of people without health care has risen from 300,000 in 2008 to 600,000 today. Some 6.1 million people do not have regular access to food. The World Food Program has lost half of its funding in a year, and food aid has been limited to basic food supplies. The UN reports that this loss of aid has had a devastating impact on the lives of people who had to endure three years of intense hunger and severe illness. Meanwhile, the recently published Ethiopian Humanitarian
