Monodentate thioether sulfide ([N2S2N2S2]3-) ligand containing two thioether units was synthesized as a precursor of S-S linked bis-thioether unit and has been employed for the synthesis of copper(II) complexes as S-S linked bis-thioether unit was expected to possess copper chelating ability. The ligand was characterized by the elemental analysis, FT-IR, 1H NMR and single crystal X-ray crystallography. The square pyramidal structure of ligand was supported by the fact that (1)H NMR spectra show two olefinic proton signals and molecular ion peak. In the

The present invention relates to an exhaust-gas turbocharger for internal combustion engines and more particularly, to an exhaust-gas turbocharger for an internal combustion engine which is provided with an exhaust-gas recirculation (EGR) passage and a charge-air cooling passage. The exhaust-gas turbocharger which is well known in the art for raising the power output of an internal combustion engine by compressing the air fed to the engine for supercharging (boosting) is now widely used and serves to raise the pressure of the air fed to the engine so that the air becomes high in temperature. The compressed air thus high in temperature is fed to the engine to be used for combustion, so that it is required to cool the high-temperature air fed to the engine. It is well known in the art that the compressor of an exhaust-gas turbocharger is also used as a turbo-motor, which is called a turbo-generator, and this turbo-generator can generate electric power by rotating the compressor at a high speed in the exhaust-gas recirculation (EGR) passage which is provided for recirculating the exhaust gas into the intake pipe so as to reduce the NOx (nitrogen oxides) discharged from the engine
