Department of Paediatrics, Trauma and Gynaecology, Radboud University Nijmegen Medical Centre, the Netherlands. 49 children born at between 21+6 and 36+6 weeks GA or born SGA with a birth weight
The RSPCA has moved to protect an endangered species living in Tasmania that has been pushed to the brink of extinction, thanks to the species being legally prohibited from being captive bred. Key points: The Spontaneous Primate Rescue Centre (SPRC) in the north of Tasmania is now being moved out of sight
The Spontaneous Primate Rescue Centre (SPRC) in the north of Tasmania is now being moved out of sight As a result, the centre has had to cease breeding baboons, and is now moving to a new location at the state's south
As a result, the centre has had to cease breeding baboons, and is now moving to a new location at the state's south The move is due to new laws around the breeding and ownership of primates, which mean the centre is no longer able to perform breeding
The centre, which is not-for-profit, rescues primates from humans who abandon them, or, in some cases, use them in cruel ways. Space to play or pause, M to mute, left and right arrows to seek, up and down arrows for volume. Listen Duration 1cb139a0ed
