A: According to Auto Diagnostics, your current serial number is #243 or #24350 This number is available on the Launch X431 box. A standard serial number label will be present on that box. It seems that this can be reset using the following serial number: #24349 During the course of out development of an application we tend to start as we mean to go on, we will look at current trends and see what makes sense and re-use what we can, or at the least ignore them if they seem to add nothing to our progress. This is an inordinate amount of time and with us hitting our second year of development we believe we can a significant amount of this. After all if we don't we'll start sounding like the classic artist stuttering over a work in progress or worse the engineer touting their pointless code of choice. So today we have decided to kill a trend that might well become a code bloater and that is making some of us very, very cross. MVC is dead, long live MVC MVC means Model View Controller. All that means is that your code splits itself into three distinct components. The Model is the bit that you fetch information from and store in to your database if required, the View is where you display the information in the best way possible for your users and finally the Controller holds your piece of data and manages your synchronisation.
