Monday, August 25, 2006 The struggles of living with Gastroparesis I have been dealing with gastroparesis for about 7 years now. There is only one week when I am totally symptom free. Every other week I have some kind of symptom. As the end of the year approaches for the summer, I begin to look forward to my weekends. This year, as my symptoms have been a bit better, I have begun planning a longer adventure with my husband. Once we returned from our trip with our kids this past week, we went on a couple of long drives with nothing but the open road. We were on our way to visit my parents this weekend. We arrived at my parents home at 10:00 am on Friday. We had a nice conversation with my parents. Dad mentioned about me having gastroparesis. I feel I am more open with my parents now that I know they will be approaching 60 this year. I had a nice weekend and sat outside as much as possible. Saturday night I had a slight pain in my stomach, which I went into the bathroom and noticed I had blood. I would not think anything of it until my husband noticed I was not feeling so good. I was so weak, I did not want to go to the bathroom. I went to bed early because I did not want to be conscious in case I had another pain. Unfortunately, I had another pain that night. It was getting late, and we had to be up early tomorrow morning. I went back to bed. I got up 09e8f5149f
