Learn How to Edit Photos With Photoshop and Elements: See what you can do with these free software products. Finding Value-for-Money Photoshop Software Sometimes, you just can't spend the big bucks. Luckily, you can get great images out of Photoshop if you're willing to put in the time and learn how to use it. Where you can find more-expensive packages, such as the Adobe Photoshop Lightroom collection, you can find a version that performs like a more costly software. The following sections describe some of the programs in the Adobe Photoshop suite of products and provide a discount on the software so you can compare features. Note that some of the programs described in this chapter require a subscription to Adobe Photoshop CC or Lightroom, so check that out first; you may not be able to get the image-editing software with a subscription only to Photoshop or Lightroom. PhotoKeys PhotoKeys is a Photoshop plugin that helps you automate image-editing tasks such as color matching, exposure, and contrast. It's more than just a filter — it lets you share images through automatic color correction in a way that's hard to duplicate with other software. On the other hand, PhotoKeys has built-in presets that cover many situations, and you get to choose the right one for your images. When you open a file in Photoshop, the program automatically adds a new layer, and if you choose the layer icon at the bottom of the Layers palette, you see your PhotoKeys layer. You can then add a filter to the layer or change its opacity. PhotoKeys is less than $70, and it's available through the Adobe website (www.adobe.com/creativecloud/photokeys/home.html). Photoshop Elements Picking up where Photoshop left off, Elements is a lower-cost offering. Elements is a program that lets you work on image files, and even on videos. It has some of the same tools as Photoshop, such as layers and adjustment layers, but as a basic program, it lacks some of the more advanced tools. Because Elements can open PSD and GIF files and works with video, it's a great program to expand your library of images and video. ImagenIQ ImagenIQ ($79) is a collection of tools to help you get the best version of your photos. The program provides retouching tools for exposures, color, contrast, brightness, clarity, and exposure

On line bookstore When I was being interviewed for the bookshop job I was asked if I knew how to work with computers. I do but not as well as I would like. It does explain why we are still being computer literate. I was initially very keen to work at Unity bookshop. I looked at other jobs but the skills I would gain would be useful in my studies. When you join an online bookshop you start at an assistant level and work your way up. We get about 8-10 hours training every 6 weeks and then a 6 hour or so induction in the shop. I have been in the shop now for almost 12 months and it has been a steep learning curve. Around 75% of what we sell comes from Amazon and our prices are determined by this market. The high end of the market is very competitive so most of what we sell is in the £10 to £20 price bracket. Whilst we have about 300 books on our shelves we do have a second space on the main floor in the café to store our bigger books and larger collections. As well as this we have about 200 books online in our catalogue. We don't charge VAT on online orders. The cost of this is currently about £130 a week. The great thing is that we have thousands of books on the website and you can get a larger selection than you can in some bricks and mortar shops. We also have over 2,000 books in our online catalogue and you can spend time browsing, so if you are looking for a particular book don't just dash in and order it off Amazon. If you visit a bookshop in town you will notice that they have a section of local literature. We don't have a local section in the shop but we do have a great range of books from UWE. On Facebook and Twitter we have a range of events that we put out. In addition to this we do about 4-5 events a year in the shop. All of these events are always free to attend. We hold a Christmas book/game gift idea contest where we ask our visitors to choose a gift for someone for Christmas from our catalogue. The person who gives the best gift idea wins one of about 50 prizes. This contest takes place in the shop on a Saturday morning. As well as the events in the shop there are also about a dozen monthly events on Facebook. We have

Repeated infusions of interleukin-2 in patients with metastatic malignant melanoma. The effects of repeated infusions of interleukin-2 (IL-2) on malignant melanoma were investigated in 35 evaluable patients, 18 of whom were given IL-2 alone; 10 were given IL-2 in combination with lymphokine-activated killer (LAK) cells; and seven received LAK cells alone. Twenty-six of these patients had melanoma with cutaneous lymph node (nodal) metastases (stage M1), and the rest (stage M0) had distant metastases. There was no evidence that IL-2 administration stimulated host-reactive cells in vitro. Patients were given IL-2 administered by bolus injection six times a day for 4 consecutive days followed by a 2-week rest period. Responses were measured clinically by radiologic and by biologic (IL-2 assay) response criteria. Correlative studies by microcytotoxicity assay and fluorescent-activated cell sorter analysis showed that the tumor burden in nodal and subcutaneous lesions was decreased in 13 of 14 patients who had both a biochemical and a radiologic response. Responses correlated with the concentration of IL-2 in biologic assays performed on circulating lymphocytes. Adverse effects included the characteristic flu-like symptoms of fever, chills, and myalgia/arthritis; marked transient capillary leakage (serum protein and creatine phosphokinase elevations greater than 10 times normal); an intense pleuritic chest pain, resulting in chest tube drainage; and, in 3 patients, pulmonary embolus and pulmonary hypertension, manifested clinically by dyspnea and dramatic increase in pulmonary vascular resistance. The overall response rate was 45% (4 of 9). Of the 18 patients who received IL-2 alone, 2 of 10 and 8 of 8 had a positive biochemical and radiologic response, respectively. Of the 7 patients given IL-2 and LAK cells, all had a positive biochemical response ($p = 0.0007$), and 6 of 7 had a positive radiological response, though with less frequency than for IL-2 alone ($p = 0.13$). Thus IL-2 is active against metastatic melanoma. Toxicities noted with greater frequency than in the IL-2 monotherapy arm were inflammatory responses. Prospective randomized studies are needed to determine the effect of this regimen on patient survival.Q: How
