I've been baking since I was a kid, both for leisure and also for friends and family, but this book offers baking techniques and recipes that I've never seen before. A "Baked Dreams" bakers cookbook is just that, a dream for any baking enthusiast. There are books full of tutorials, and there are books full of recipes. This book is in the middle of the spectrum and puts an emphasis on both, and even when it mixes recipes together, it manages to keep the flow going. The book itself is very sturdy and feels almost like a gift when you receive it. It comes in a designer gift box, and I love the fact that they included a decorating tutorial to make custom gift tags for the box. At the beginning of the book, there is a section explaining what the Baked Dreams crew is all about, how baking is more than a hobby for them, and how baking is a lifestyle. It explains that the first cookbook they are presenting to the public will reflect what they grew up on, because the food they grew up on inspired them to start making and creating their own recipes. One of the recipes I was most excited to try, was the blueberry muffins. I've seen blueberry muffins before but they always looked plain, and I wasn't sure how well they would turn out after the first taste. To my surprise, they actually tasted like Blueberry muffins that you'd get from a coffee shop, and I was in fact amazed by how well the book turned out. The recipe itself is extremely simple: just add eggs and sugar to bread flour and let bake. After I was done with mine, I was able to customize it by adding blueberries instead of the walnuts that

, The President: Salve .The anatomic classification of transjugular intrahepatic portosystemic stent shunt complications: incidence and significance of hepatic vein angulation. To investigate the incidence of angulation in the hepatic vein (HV) in relation to the incidence of transjugular intrahepatic portosystemic shunt (TIPS) complication. Additionally, to determine if angulation is an important factor in predicting the incidence of TIPS complications. A total of 618 TIPS were performed in 462 patients. The patients were divided into three groups according to HV angle: group I-O, no obstruction (n = 277); group II-A, obstruction to the convexity (n = 188); and group III-B, obstruction to the concavity (n = 99). Angiography was performed in 90% of cases. Repeated angiograms were done in 10% of cases. Iliac portosystemic pressures were measured in all patients. Follow-up angiograms were performed in 442 patients (86%). Initial misplacement of TIPS (n = 106) was seen in 45 patients. The patency rate of TIPS was 81%, and 86% when excluding stent misplacement. There was a significant difference in the incidence of complication between no stenosis (group I) and stenosis (groups II and III) (P = .000). Stenosis at a point between 25% and 75% of the lumen caused leakage (group II-A) had a 10% occurrence of complication, whereas stenosis at a point between 75% and 90% of the lumen (group III-B) had a 14% complication rate. The incidence of complication in the hepatic vein was higher in patients with stenosis at the convexity of the stenosis. There are numerous steps in the development of any novel, desirable plant germplasm.

Plant breeding begins with the analysis and definition of problems and weaknesses of the current germplasm, the establishment of program goals, and the definition of specific breeding objectives. The next step is selection of germplasm that possesses the traits to meet the program goals. The goal is to combine in a single cultivar an improved combination of desirable traits from the parental germplasm.
