To provide a good mechanical connection, the connecting members that make up the coupling must have a high stiffness, and this stiffness is equal to the angularity between the rail yard and the impure goods car. However, a connecting member with a high stiffness is more likely to crack or fail, as a result of small imperfections in the joint, resulting in a catastrophic failure. In other embodiments, the joining assembly comprises a stab coupler that is engaged by the connecting member of the rail car in order to form the mechanical connection between the rail yard and the impure goods car. The stab coupler can include hardened material to help prevent cracking or breaking of the coupling. The hardened material can be formed by the treating of an iron cast component with, for example, a carburizing process, or the like. The hardened material can be an iron-based carbide, and the iron-based carbide can be carburized. Alternatively, the hardened material can be an alloy of the joining assembly, such as stainless steel, or any other suitable material known in the art. The hardened material can be formed in situ by, for example, thermal spraying. In some embodiments, the hardened material can also be formed by the use of a hardening agent such as, for example, a carburizing agent, and the hardening agent can be applied to the component by using a suitable application apparatus.from distutils.util import strtobool import numpy as np import openmc from openmc.distributions.logistic import Logistic from openmc.distributions.normal import Normal from openmc.util import rand_matrix from openmc.util import logsumexp def _get_distribution(model_class, *args, kwargs): """ First distribution argument is the distribution type, the second is the distribution shape and the remaining are attributes.

I have all of my alarm icons setup for Saturdays, and on many of them the alarm can be canceled simply by moving the icon to a different date. Obviously a Sunday or Monday will never appear to be active unless it is on a Sunday or Monday, but I would still like to have alarms e79caf774b

EngineBuilder is a new toolset from Epic, the game-making company co-founded by Epic Games Inc.'s Tim Sweeney and ex-id Software programmer Cliff Bleszinski. The EngineBuilder team at Epic is headed up by Bleszinski and includes familiar faces from the id Software and Epic side of the company's history, such as founder John Carmack. To Epic, EngineBuilder is about "building the best game engine for the PC and supporting the PC platform," explains Epic marketing head Jay Pinkston. "We're also trying to reach other platforms as well, but the focus on the PC is what EngineBuilder is for." Though EngineBuilder is not intended to run games, it is a serious project with the goal of creating one of the best professional-level engines available on the market. Epic is relying on Unreal Engine technology as a guiding light, and Bleszinski boasts that EngineBuilder will have the company's highest-quality technology. "Right now, the EngineBuilder is extremely ambitious and this engine is incredible," Bleszinski says. "It has some things that most other engines don't have yet, and there's a whole bunch of stuff they're going to add. It's a really exciting time, and we're really proud of it." Unreal Engine 3 is widely considered one of the best engines available, but EngineBuilder aims to make Unreal Engine 4 better still. Even though Unreal Engine 3 is the only version of Unreal Engine to be released as open source code, Epic is readying Unreal Engine 3.2, a code release of unfinished engine features. Unreal Engine 4 is expected to come out as a paid-for engine next year. "So our goal is to keep EngineBuilder ahead of the development of Unreal Engine 4," says Pinkston. EngineBuilder is the successor to what
