The 'Resource Monitor' option of Windows 7 is used for monitoring real time resources of your system. It shows the usage of every single resource in real time. You can manage RAM, CPU and Disk usage to troubleshoot performance issues of your system. You can also see if any process is consuming more or lesser resources. The 'Resource Monitor' section is accessible from the 'Start' menu. Just click on Start and search for 'Resource Monitor'. You can also go to the control panel and open the performance option. Task Manager is the basic tool for handling and monitoring of applications running on the system. If you find your PC running slow due to an application or if it has hanged unexpectedly, then you can use Task Manager to identify the processes that are occupying more memory or CPU resources and can be terminated to free up the needed resources. The 'Task Manager' section can be accessed by clicking on the 'Start' menu and searching for 'Task Manager'. You can open the control panel and locate the performance option. Most computer users would want to organize and structure the huge amount of data on their hard drive. Most of them can either go for a data backup program or rely on PC file backup solutions. Here are some common data backup scenarios for both Windows and Linux: Backup from the Desktop: If you would like to make an image of your desktop, you can use 'Recover'. This software is available as freeware in most distributions. While you backup the desktop, it will also create an image file on the hard drive. It is an excellent tool that is very easy to use and is available for Windows and Linux platforms. Creating a Backup from the Command Line: The command-line 'tar' and 'cpio' utilities are often used for creating and backing up large files and folders. The 'tar' b7e8fdf5c8

AutoMouseClicker is a software package for Windows XP, Vista, 7, 8, 10 and Linux that makes it easy to automate mouse clicks and mouse moves. It can also be used with a touch screen or with a gamepad such as the Logitech G27. Automatic mouse clicks are used to move the mouse cursor. The mouse cursor is moved to a certain point, and then a click is performed. The point of the mouse cursor is continuously moved. This may be done either by moving the mouse (panning) or by dragging. Moving the mouse from point A to point B may be accomplished by using a combination of panning and dragging. Known as mouse mover, a mover is an object that moves with the mouse cursor, as long as the cursor is inside the object. AutoMouseClicker supports moving objects, including buttons, menus and pictures. A mover can be moved by several ways. As mentioned above, mouse clicks can be used to move the mouse cursor. It can also be used to move the mover. Clicking on a picture (menu item) will invoke its context menu. Mouse moves are made by dragging (or flying) the mouse cursor. Either a left-click or a right-click can be used to initiate a move. When a mover is moused, it follows the mouse cursor. The mover can be dragged by following (mouse drag) or following (air drag). (About Help Files) It is common for little or no documentation to be provided with software. However, it is possible to do this using the help facility which is a real time help viewer. This capability is found using Help at the start of a program. An auto button will have an auto button logo as the default application icon for the button. The auto button is an icon based button and cannot be customised. The button must be filled with a background colour to generate click events. The button can be enabled (clickable) or disabled (not clickable). AutoMouseClicker Licensing Pricing and Availability AutoMouseClicker is free to use. A help file is included. AutoMouseClicker Security Information This software is licensed, NOT sold, to run on personal computers. This software is compatible with Windows XP.
