Sri Lanka: Mahinda Rajapaksa's anti-Muslim riot of 2008 go unpunished Sammy Althoumane and Khalid Yasin 12 July 2014 Sri Lanka's Lessons from the Past Sri Lanka's Lessons from the Past By Khalid Yasin and Sammy Althoumane There have been many lessons learned from the tsunami of 2004. Most of them were executed after the disaster. The aftermath was loss of lives, loss of human rights, loss of infrastructure and loss of business. As Sri Lankans were recovering from the massive devastation of 2004 tsunami, there was another disaster unfolding in the country. During the Sri Lankan civil war in 2009-2010, attacks against Christians, Muslims, Tamil and Muslim minority communities escalated. More than 80 ethnic Tamil civilians were killed and more than 300 were injured during the 2009-2010 months. In addition, more than 4500 individuals were displaced. In 2009 the Muslim population was approximately 6 million. Most of the Muslims were Tamils and the majority of them lived in the Northern Province. The Muslim percentage of the population in the Northern Province was approximately 20 percent. In the election of January 2010, the Muslim population cast their votes and elected 50 percent Muslim and 50 percent Sinhalese. In the election of January 2011, the Muslim population was more than 50 percent of the population, approximately 7.5 million. However, because of the ethnic factor, the Muslim ethnicity was changed to the Sinhalese ethnic identity. (World Tribune, March 23, 2010). In addition, in the election of January 2014, the Muslim population voted 80 percent Muslim, that is, only 20 percent of the population voted. Meanwhile, as a result of the Jan 2010 election, those Muslims who voted changed their identity to that of Sri Lankans and a percentage of those votes which were cast by the Muslims were lost to them. This resulted in those Muslims who voted in January 2010 losing a total of 100,000 votes. It was also significant that the Muslim population did not vote in the January 2014 election.
