Powering the MotionBuilder Live Set for Autodesk 2012-2016.Q: Drawing to a WM_PAINT in a WindowsFormsHost (UWP) I have an AppBar that contains a WPF custom tooltip. In a normal WindowsFormsHost I've created this tooltip in the click event of a Button. Now I want to use this in a WindowsFormsHost in a UWP. This UWP will be running in different scenarios so the tooltips should appear and disappear as it needs. I have tried to draw to a picturebox that I've placed into a WindowsFormsHost, but nothing is displayed on the screen. private void button1_Click(object sender, EventArgs e) { var canvas = CanvasHelper.FromPixel(this.MainWindow.Left, this.MainWindow.Top); canvas.Freeze(); var bmp = new BitmapImage(); bmp.SetSource(canvas); pictureBox1.Image = bmp; }

shortcuts for selected text I am a visual method user in vim, but find myself not using it when writing code in smaller projects. I find the selection of text that I want to work on is a slow (if not impossible) process. What I would like to be able to do is change to a visual selection mode, execute a keybinding, and then either select all text that matches the keybinding or allow me to keep typing to continue selecting as I type. Does anyone know a way to do that? A: What you want is either `g+q` or `g+r`. There are plenty of reasons to prefer these commands (see Vim Hotkeys and How to Use the Visual mode) but since you're asking for a "key-binding" I'm going to assume that you're more interested in learning the fundamental use of the `:help visual-ex` command than in learning all the shortcuts and what they do. So in the command mode (i.e. when you're in insert mode or in the command line), you could hit `g+q` to select everything. If that's not what you're looking for you could define a keystroke mapping in your `.vimrc` file. The `:h mksession` command will help you on this.

For example if you want to map g+q to do the same thing you could define this mapping in your.vimrc map g+q :vimgrep ^>/ " You can also map g+q to do something more powerful than just copying the visual range to the command line. map g+q :call cursor2line('^') e79caf774b

Link to motion by 3dfacade: Why is combining the first bit of each byte in 32 bit files the same as combining them in 64 bit files? Many of the 32 bit to 64 bit tutorials and guides I have found for compilers say that when combining bits they operate on the first bit of each byte, such as in this guide. However, I am observing that when the first bit is removed from each byte and combined it is the same as the bytes in their original order. For example, if I add these two 32 bit files together the result is the same, for all files (ff1, ff2) FILE *f1 =

fopen("1.in","rb"); FILE *f2 = fopen("2.
