Arrest made after Brussels hotel fire Published duration 24 August 2012 image caption No-one was injured in the fire A man has been arrested in connection with a Brussels hotel fire that killed a teenage girl, Belgian media reports say. A witness said the building in the Belgian capital was engulfed by flames early on Tuesday, and that she helped a 19-year-old man carrying a child out of the building. He was so "violently strong" that he could not be stopped, the witness said. At least four people have died in fires this summer, in one of which a woman was "pulled out of a window" at a hospital. Police and fire service officials have not yet confirmed the number of deaths. Local reports earlier in the day quoted prosecutors as saying that a 15-year-old girl had died in the fire in the Brussels district of Uccle. Rescuers were called to the hotel shortly after 03:00 local time (02:00 GMT), but it was too late to save the teenager. Flames had already spread into the apartment of an older woman in the building, the reports said. Rescuers tried to remove the woman's body from the building, but she was taken to hospital in a critical condition, the reports said. The Belgian media have not yet identified the man they say was
