FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay. Players are now able to control their team with their entire foot, not just a single foot, and call plays with precision and power. During gameplay, players can call passes and crosses with an over the shoulder throw that delivers the ball with the impact of a prop-forward pass, providing control, trajectory and distance just like real-life. The new skill-shot/snipe system means that more dribble runs and passes are possible, while the innovative new sub-shot/break system allows players to call passes that are not part of their primary action, or to run through opponents in order to move to a better scoring position. When the sub-shot is performed, the ball transfers to the last player with possession and not in the next available player on the team. The same is true for the break-shot. Teams can effectively use these new actions to control the tempo of the game, allowing them to reduce the number of long phases of play. New animation features allow players to move more fluidly during action, with higher and more varied speeds. Movement and passing have been treated using motion capture to allow players to better control timing, speed, and ball trajectory. A number of minor cosmetic tweaks have been made to the ball, such as new surface designs, changes in the ball's momentum at kick-off, and adjustments to its topspin. The pitch is also an object of the game. Players can adjust the pitch's surface and design with a range of predefined variables, which creates a multitude of conditions for gameplay. The pitch can also be tilted up and down to allow for variations in the height and depth of the boundaries. Players can now customize their appearance by using the new “Retro Player” option. Retro Players are created using data from real-life players in the Motion Capture studio in London and can be used in many areas of the game. Retro Players are available to players by accessing the Create Player option at any time. A brand new camera system has been introduced, with the option to select a “follow camera”
