Write the missing number below the number line.Q: Is the probability of winning a game at each move inversely proportional to the probability of winning an interval? Consider the following proposition: At move  $n$  in a game between Player 1 and Player 2, Player 1 wins iff Player 2 played strictly better than Player 1 at move  $n$  and at least one of the previous  $n-1$  moves. With this definition, we can partition the  $2^{n-1}$  possible sequences (in other words, partition the set of sequences  $\{X_1, X_2, \dots, X_n\}$ , where  $X_j$  is the sequence that ends at move  $j$ ) of length  $n$  in two sets: The set of sequences that win the game The set of sequences that lose the game I am interested in the number of sequences that win the game (see also this question). Now if I denote by  $p_n$  the probability of winning at move  $n$  in a game, is there a closed formula for  $p_n$ ? More generally, suppose that  $\{X_1, X_2, \dots, X_n\}$  is a set of sequences of length  $n$ : is there a closed formula for  $\sum_{k=1}^{2^n} p_k \cdot |X_k|$ ? That is, I'm interested in the probability of a sequence wining the game. A: A sequence  $X$  wins a game if  $n_1, n_2, \dots, n_k$  occur, where the  $n_i$  are the times the first player (the one whose turn it is to make a move) goes from  $n_i$  to  $n_{i+1}$ . Then
$$p_k = \sum_{i=1}^k \left(1 - \sum_{j=1}^{i-1} p_{n_j}\right)$$
 This is obtained from the recurrence
$$p_k = \sum_{i=1}^k \left(1 - \sum_{j=1}^{i-1} p_{n_j}\right)$$
