galactose (uGAL). Lactase activity was assayed in erythrocytes (EMEA) and jejunal mucosa (JM), and lactase gene copy number (GCN) was assessed in jejunal mucosa. Oral galactose administration resulted in maximal uGAL excretion in the oldest age group, with differences noted for the size of the absorption peak. The mean area under the uGAL curve (AUC) was higher in the 5-6-mo-old group compared with all other groups. Higher AUC values were also obtained in the 1-5-mo-old group compared with the 6-12-mo-old group, and in the 2-5-mo-old group compared with the 6-12-mo-old group. The shape of the uGAL curve differed in younger and older children. There were no age-related differences in EMEA activity and the mean area under the EMEA curve (AUC), and no significant difference in the AUC for JM lactase activity or GCN was observed in any of the groups. The mean ratio for GCN/EEMA for the first 6 mo of life was  $1.3 \pm 0.3$ . A reduction in the GCN/EEMA ratio was observed in the 7-12-mo-old group, when values were compared with the group of children up to 6 mo of age. In older children, the mean GCN/EEMA ratio was
