With his best friend and soulmate, Cooper, he navigates through a terrifying future dominated by beautiful mutants. Together, they must find a way to break the time loop, or let the world be destroyed. Reeperbahn is at the center of a global struggle for world domination, and the two teenagers are right in the middle of it all. Will Edward and Coop be able to stop the villain and save themselves?Computer science is no longer a lone male sport. The field has produced many notable women over the years, including Grace Hopper (of the programmers' honorific, "Hopper," being named after her), Ada Lovelace (who, remarkably, published the world's first algorithm in 1843), and even Katherine Johnson (the mathematician who helped put the first human into orbit). The gender gap in science is also slowly beginning to narrow. Just last year, the tech industry's International Women's Day celebrations were marked with a giant "Women in Technology" billboard, showing the world that a growing number of women are taking over the future of tech. Now, an unusual, but welcome, trend is making headway in the scientific world: female scientists are finally taking the spotlight. Researchers are increasingly trying to diversify their field, and it's starting to pay off. In a new study published today (Feb. 13) in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, researchers identify a range of factors that have helped women
