"World trade is shaped by rules-based, level-playing field trading and the enforcement of these rules," the statement said. Related: Singapore is a big boy, but sometimes even big boys don't feel like playing by the rules It has now made it harder for foreigners to set up new companies that are aimed at global markets, apart from activities that are related to Singapore's defense or security. The move is likely to fuel international concerns that Singapore, a global city and economic powerhouse
