The Author David Berman I am a writer, photographer, artist and entrepreneur from Philadelphia. My work has been published in The Atlantic, The New York Times, Esquire, Wired, Fast Company, among other publications. And I am the author of the first book about America's largest and most exciting urban farm, the Sunblock Farm. This is my personal blog.

Recent Posts I am sitting here trying to read The New York Times' recent profile of Sara Sherman, one of the first people to achieve an early retirement after the 2008 financial crisis. She currently lives and works on the 38,000 square foot Sunblock Farm, a "20-acre farm that last year became the largest urban farm in the country." How to unlock Infineon LG for Vodafone, Mobilesoft?The present invention relates to the field of portable analysis systems, and more particularly to calibration and control of such systems. Monitoring of, for example, indoor air quality, dust, humidity, temperature, and air contamination, is often desirable for any of a wide variety of reasons. For example, environmental conditions in a hospital or other healthcare setting may need to be regulated for treating patients or for maintaining the general health and comfort of personnel. Manufacturers of equipment, such as semiconductor equipment, may also desire to monitor environmental conditions in a clean room so that contaminant concentrations can be reduced to acceptable levels to prevent damage to or contamination of the equipment. To monitor these conditions, a portable monitor may be advantageously employed. For example, a stationary monitor is often placed in an area and configured to detect and measure contaminant concentrations. Due to the costs and disadvantages associated with operating such stationary equipment, it is often advantageous to employ a portable monitor for this purpose. For example, by placing the portable monitor in an area to be monitored and thereafter moving the portable monitor to different locations in the area, a time consuming task of having to manually move the stationary monitor to different locations is avoided. To accurately determine contaminant levels, the portable monitor is calibrated at the time of installation. The portable monitor may be calibrated prior to use by simply installing a preprogrammed calibration module in the portable monitor. The calibration module may be replaced with a calibration module that has been
