* Photoshop CS5: This version of Photoshop is designed for both photographers and creative professionals. If you are a photographer, it has extensive manipulation tools for the photo-editing process, and if you are a graphic designer, it has tools for creating backgrounds and special effects. In addition to the tools for editing, Photoshop's PDF document standard is used by most other graphics programs, so you can also create a PDF file from any Photoshop drawing file. Photoshop CS5 also has a lot of new tools, including the following: * Content-Aware Crop tool. This tool makes complex image editing tasks simple for those who are not Photoshop experts. It is also a helpful tool for scaling objects to the full pixel size of your image. * New and improved tools for complicated painting tasks. * Content-Aware Fill. This tool can recognize and select specific areas of your photo — even text — and fill them in with new colors. * Content-Aware Face Detection. The Face Detection tool is one of the most useful tools in the bag because it instantly locates and identifies faces in your picture. * Masking tools to enable you to selectively delete, move, or change a specific portion of an image, without changing the rest of it. * Most people can handle the basic photo-editing functions with the tool that the camera provided with your computer. They can change brightness, contrast, etc. However, if you want to do something more complicated, you need to use Photoshop's photo-editing tools. # THE ARTIST'S RULES OF PHOTOGRAPHY Professional photographers often make some extra rules to follow in their work. If you want to keep control over your image, you should be able to make your own rules. ## The Photographer's Rules Make a list of the rules you want to follow when you work with your images. Start with the following list: * Only work with images that I can describe in words. My photographic skill won't be as good if I don't understand the subject. * I don't work with color much. I use black and white primarily. * I don't cut anything out of my image. All parts are supposed to make sense. * I don't shade or soften. It's too much work. * I don't add text and create fancy logos. If I can

Posts Tagged 'plastic surgery' On September 14, 2010, Andre 3000 updated his MySpace profile with a photo of himself wearing yet another hospital gown. Why? Because after a recent nose reduction surgery, he's got the cute little button on his nose as confirmation of his new, comfortable-looking and -looking-great-ness. On March 18, 2010, celebrities started sharing selfies via Twitter. But no you, just looking at these pictures on a retinal display. And these, you, don't even need a retina to see. On March 3, 2010, Egyptian politician and environmental activist Hassan Nafea (aka Hassan Siwek) shocked the world when he appeared on The Oprah Winfrey Show. And he didn't just appear, his head and neck did. He had a 25 percent reduction in circumference, including his nose, upper lip and part of his cheeks. Here is a photo of Siwek on the Oprah show: On December 12, 2009, Beyonce Knowles gave birth to her daughter, Blue Ivy. On February 5, 2010, Blue Ivy gave birth to her first cousin. Here is a photo of Blue Ivy in her tiny onesie: On June 18, 2010, Leonardo DiCaprio's brother, Giancarlo (aka Rick) posted a photo of his knee, where he needed the injections to cause the lateral opening of a bone cavity for an artificial knee joint. While Rick was recovering, he called his brother, Leonardo, to tell him about his open-knee predicament.The Israel Cancer Association (ICA) is delighted to announce that Anna Nachon, Director of the ICA, is the winner of the Ovarian Cancer and the Making An Informed Decision Together research/training grant. Dr. Nachon will carry out a research project on issues related to informed decision-making as part of the research project granted to the Ovarian Cancer Association of Canada as part of the Ovarian Cancer Partnership and Learning (OCPLA). Proton transfer pathways through an acentric water hexamer. A computational study of the proton transfer pathways through the acentric water hexamer $H_3O(+)(H_2O)(n)$ with n = 5, 6, 7, and 8 is reported. For n = 6 and 7, the mean intramolecular distances $d(H_3O(+)(H_2O)(n))$ have been determined by an energy minimization of the potential energy surfaces in the D(3h) point group. $d(H_3O(+)(H_2O)(6)) = 1.91$ +/- 0.01 A, $d(H_3O(+)(H_2O)(7)) = 2.20$ +/- 0.05 A, and $d(H_3O(+)(H_2O)(8)) = 2.43$ +/- 0.02 A. As n increases, the intermolecular proton-transfer path involves a cascade of hydrogen bonds between the various water molecules. Only a few of these paths can be characterized by the hydrogen bond analysis and it is shown that the existence of longer paths is mainly associated with water molecule rotations around their symmetry axes. Conformational analysis within the potential energy surfaces has also been carried out with the aim of locating the low energy features of the paths.Q: How to execute a file while using virtualenv When I make a virtualenv I am supposed to install pip, and all of it's dependencies in the virtualenv. After they have been properly installed I should execute it's pip freeze. In this case, the pip freeze is an AWS python script. Can I use the current terminal within virtualenv to execute the files that are placed in /bin? A: I am not sure if I get your question right. Usually, /bin is not a part of your system environment when you launch virtualenv. This is why you need to install the dependencies into the virtualenv first. When you re-create the virtualenv later on, it is by definition empty and running pip freeze again will show nothing. But, if you have this python script which you want to call within your virtual env, you can still make use of the virtualenv's python interpreter that is available. You can import your Python script into that interpreter like this: python -c 'import my_script' Note the -c here. If you want to use this approach for running pip freeze,
