As the title explains, the game is a strategy RPG in which characters appear as a party, and a player can first start a game to experience the game within a party, and after switching to another character, such as a different nation and race, and increasing a party's party level to 10, they can advance the party to the game's second level. In the game, a party consists of a player and one to six characters. The maximum level of the characters is currently 99, and all classes are available. If the same character is at a higher level than the other characters, the character with a level 1 will be more powerful. If the level is higher than 10, it will be much stronger. HATSUNE SHIBA, SENGAORA (“BABY”) SHIBA, AMI SAKAMOTO, ASHITA SAKAMOTO, YASUTAKA ISHI, TSUTOMU YASHIRO, and YOICHI KOIWA StarCraft II

StarCraft II is like the high-tech card game of the future. While a game of strategic challenge, it is also a tale of races that ally and compete against one another. As they battle, the gamer has the opportunity to either build numerous types of military units in an attempt to defend their home planet or offensive units in order to destroy the opponents planet. Following the success of its predecessor, the game offers an innovative battle system, advanced strategies, and game modes that take into account its unique character. Teamwork, strategy, competition, and rank advancement are core elements of the game.

Some places are old are abandoned, and many others are volcanic. Even if they are related to the underworld, many different races coexist together, and some make use of the existence of these places. Each area is also different from the one immediately before it in a way that no one is sure how it came to be as it is. Each place has its own surrounding geography, ecology, the weather, monsters, strange things, and other factors. And each place is surrounded by a range of other places, including its own. These places can be places in any generation, and, if one is called upon to construct the next generation, the gathering of materials, construction, and so on must be completed. It is said that places like these will not proceed, through the passage of time.
