So do many others -- but not all of them are keeping their users posted. A recent study by the Internet Advertising Bureau found that 7 percent of marketers list social media in their policy and 88 percent said they were aware of their social media policy. But the reality is the vast majority of marketers are not specific enough in their social media policy, leaving their companies open to lawsuit. (See a spreadsheet with the data here.) The infographic below explores the fine details of the major platforms and how you can develop a social media policy and enforcement process that works for your brand and your employees. Have you ever been unsure about what the rules are, or how they'll be enforced? Helping you create a social media policy is our job. Drop us a line with your questions and we'd love to answer them for you. Infographic by: The N-terminus of calmodulin binds to C-peptide in clathrin coated vesicles from porcine adrenal cortex. Experiments were performed to study the binding of N-terminal synthetic peptides of calmodulin (alpha- and beta-peptides), fragments of calmodulin, and rat brain calmodulin to proteins associated with clathrin coated vesicles from porcine adrenal cortex. The relative efficiency of these interactions was assessed by cross-linking with iodo[14C]acetic acid or iodo-acetic anhydride (Merck), by binding of 125I-labeled synthetic peptides to clathrin coated vesicles from the cortex, and by binding of 125I-calmodulin to
