DAMASMASTER777SERIAL

hola compadre ¿Por qué nadie le dice que es una caja de metal y no de papel? se transforma en madera y se aplasta. ÂiNo vamos a matar ni a matar! Less than two weeks after walking out of the Democratic National Convention, Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT) will be the first to weigh in on the GOP convention this week. In an interview with NBC's Chuck Todd, Sanders addressed the Republican National Committee's (RNC) invitation of California Gov. Jerry Brown (D), who served as a governor under President Barack Obama. "It's time for the Republican Party to get real. We are living in a time when the middle class of this country is disappearing, when nearly one in four kids are living in poverty, when we have the highest rate of childhood poverty of any major country on earth. That's unacceptable," Sanders told Todd. "If the Republican Party wants to be successful, if we want to become a 50 state party that is appealing to minorities and women and young people, we need to change," Sanders said. "And the only way we're going to change is if millions of people stand up and demand that we change. You're not going to get there if you're just listening to the billionaire class and to the very, very rich." While Sanders said he had not made a decision on whether he would appear at the RNC, he did say he was impressed by Brown's speech at the DNC last month. "I thought that Gov. Brown was a good speaker," Sanders said. "He talked about climate change. He talked about the need for raising the minimum wage. He talked about the need for ending the war in Afghanistan. All of these are issues on which I agree with him." Sanders will be the first senator to address the RNC, and is sure to be one of the most high-profile speakers at the convention. As chairwoman of the Democratic National Convention, Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz (D-FL) also revealed that the party will not offer Vice President loe Biden a prime speaking slot, despite the former vice president's campaign having 6d1f23a050
