Using React.js, I am trying to design a simple website with the following format: The full-size images above are not actually the images used in my page, but it gives a good idea of the problem. When the following code is run, the pink header image is displayed, but the rest of the page is empty, as demonstrated by the red box below: import React, {Component} from'react'; export default class Header extends Component { render(){ return (); } } I understand that this is probably due to the div element being the first one in the DOM hierarchy, but I have tried adding a div wrapper around the image and the parent div containing the image, but no 6d1f23a050
