I'm building a website that has a list of multiple items with thumbnails. When you click on a thumbnail, it takes you to a larger image with information. What I'm asking is, is this only 1 pagination for the entire website or is there one for each list? And does it matter if the list is a large list or small? Examples of what I mean: Those two links are for different products of the same company. Shouldn't they be using the same pagination (below)? A: You need pagination for a dynamic feed of information. So if you have example.com/items/list-of-items then you need pagination for that. The Virtual PlayStation Store will launch today on mobile devices and should be available on PS Vita in the coming weeks. The store will feature the full PlayStation Store experience including all PS Now content, as well as games, movies, and TV shows. You will be able to download games, browse through PlayStation Store, and purchase them, as well as watch content in the store. The mobile store will launch with a handful of content. Here's the list of content available in the store: AVAILABLE NOW The Cast of Coraline - $4.99 Coraline, from Studio Ghibli, is a story about a girl who wants to visit the world outside of her room. Her adventures take her to "Where the Wild Things
