Try Start Menu / Add/Remove Programs and Make sure there is nothing listed under "Windows." Please try the following: Installed a new RAM chip, can't figure out why it can't find some old RAM cards???Any idea?? This is odd. not sure if you can fix it. I have manually added to my startup list (on startup after Win XP loads) DirectX I have put in a second XP CD, have tried older and newer release, built / downloaded sp3 and then ran SP3 to see if that would be the problem. I also have tried installing with OEM, and have tried this with Win XP and with XP SP2. I also have kept the registry clean, tried to delete all history and re-installed. I have tried to update the BIOS through a floppy disk, I did check that the time was correct on the boot drive.
