file.delete(@"c:\temp\deletfiles.xml"); how would i bind this grid to my combo box with a linq to sql query? a: just pass the itemsource as a parameter to the method and it will apply the query over the currently selected item. private void deletfiles(object sender, eventargs e) { file.xml"); } you can modify it in the onselectedindexchanged event like this, if you think the combobox selection change, is what you're after: sub removefile(byval sender as object, byval e as eventargs) dim file as string file = my.settings.deletefile if system.io.file.exists(file) then my.deletefile = nothing my.deletefiles = nothing my.save() my.remove(file) my.deletefiles = file end if end sub and the combobox in the xaml should look like this: q: how to restart the.net.exe file using c#? i have a.exe file created in.net c#, it contains several functions. now i want to restart the.exe file using c#, is that possible? a: if you want to restart the program that is currently running, you have to wait until the program has finished running. then, you can save the current state of the program, call your program again, and restore the saved state. if you want to restart the.exe that you've started, you can simply open a new process with the appropriate arguments, then just close the process that is currently running.exe, but you want to do that without any user interaction, you have to reboot the machine. import './network/request'; import './network/response'; import
