
The Core (2003) 1080p BrRip X264 - YIFY 64 Bit

Heizer Roshnee travels to the center of the earth in search of a powerful weapon - a small island in the center of the earth where a nuclear bomb could be used to make the core of the earth spin again. However, his search is cut short, when he is accompanied by an alien creature sent to deliver his special weapon, to an island infested with bloodthirsty wolves. But the best he can do is to distract the strange beast long enough for an underling, Nicky, to escape with the other alien, and they race back to Earth, where Nicky is soon murdered by his ex-boss. Can Roshnee and his alien friend, who is really a woman in disguise, salvage the situation? The Earth's core has stopped spinning and disasters are appearing all over the world; Birds are acting crazy, magnetic fields are causing huge electrical thunderstorms and people dying every second. Dr. Josh Keyes (Aaron Eckhart) and his crew have to travel down to the centre of the Earth and drop a nuclear bomb in an attempt to make the Earth's core spin once again. Or Mankind will perish... The Earth's core has stopped spinning and disasters are appearing all over the world; Birds are acting crazy, magnetic fields are causing huge electrical thunderstorms and people dying every second. Dr. Hardcore is a passion project for director Michael Polish, and has all the earmarks of something he will look back on fondly. It's an old fashioned morality tale, set in the 1960's, but it goes into the big picture very well. I don't know if the scene where a young waitress is threatened with being gang-raped will be particularly shocking to anyone who's been living in Hollywood, but the hell that she goes through after that event is very well-staged. She's a strong role and it's obvious that Polish was trying to make his mark and distinguish himself from the more standard drama being performed in B-Movies.

i was looking forward to seeing this film. i couldn't get into sci fi movies (sorry, i'm a hardcore sci-fi fan), but i thought it'd be fun to check it out, for a change. so, i bought the dvd, and watched it. i was sold on the dvd before the first few minutes of the film.the dvd looks and sounds good. the color is a bit washed out, but the technical aspect is superb.in a nutshell, this film is a case of two worlds colliding. two cultures, two societies, two ways of life. two sets of morals and beliefs. two ways of thinking, two ways of life. where does that leave the individual? doesn't science have the answer to that?after all, they know how the earth is created. they know everything about how it works and what's going on inside. and they also know about the creator, and what happens when that creator dies. they don't even need a creator, really. their laws are perfect. their ethics are perfect. why do we need to have any?but the movie is talking about how we don't have a creator. how we don't know anything for sure. the only thing we know, the only thing that's real, is our own lives. we try to hide this in a semi-religious manner, but the whole premise is that we have no connection to a creator. everything is a matter of chance. everything is a matter of faith. but religion isn't something you can believe in on faith. you have to believe it or you don't. because if you don't, there's no basis for it.and this is the kicker. the movie is telling us that you don't have any way of knowing who you are or where you came from. you don't know if there's anything after your death. you don't know if you even had a death. there's no way to get to any certainty.well, what about science? what about the scientific method? the scientific method asks questions, and then attempts to find the answers. the scientific method says, "let's ask what we don't know." it says, "let's figure out how this works." it says, "let's go to the core and find out."science has no creator. it isn't even something that has a creator. it's how you think about things. it's how you find out things.the whole point of this movie is that there is no difference between science and religion. that they're both just ways of thinking. but how can that be? how can science and religion be equivalent?science is the way that you find out things about the world. science is the way that you figure out the facts, and when those facts conflict with your beliefs, science is the way that you change your beliefs.that's what religion does. and that's what science does. that's what science and religion are. they're different ways of thinking about the world, but they're one and the same thing.so where is this going?i'm not saying that this movie is saying that science is wrong. i'm not saying that this movie is saying that science is evil. i'm not saying that this movie is saying that religion is evil. i'm not saying that this movie is saying that religion is right. 5ec8ef588b
