Other types of operating system updates include security patches and changes that enhance software performance. There have been a couple of questions around here how to get hold of PowerPC devtools for 10.5 Leopard, and now it seems PowerPC devs are no longer needed on this codebase. the link to this page: <https://developer.apple.com/legacy/devicemgmt/index.html> stated that: It doesn't require that you drag and drop the files from the ISO to the location from where it is to be installed. When I drag a file to the ISO installer, it uses the file location that

X_Leopard.zip 1164.100 kb. This package does not contain the content which resides on a Mac OS X install disc (v10.5.8Leopard), but it does contain a script (installHestquda.pl) that allows you to install the content (in case you downloaded a copy of the install disc). It also contains the Hestquda.pl script used to create a single click installer that includes the installHestquda.pl script and installHestquda.jar.
